Abstract

MetaFVG is a Fair Value Gap (FVG) strategy that trades higher-timeframe (HTF) liquidity imbalances confirmed by lower-timeframe (LTF) momentum. This report documents the mean-reversion variant: a rolling Spearman rank-correlation gate on HTF closes that, when its sign disagrees with a detected FVG zone’s own directional bias, redirects the trade (both the LTF confirmation and the trade parameters) to follow the disagreeing signal instead of the zone. The strategy is backtested across a 14-instrument universe assembled to be diversified by fundamental macro driver (7 FX Majors, 4 equity indices from different central banks, 3 additional FX minors), blended with equal weights. Over a 5-year window the equal-weight portfolio achieves a Sharpe ratio of 0.518 (Sortino 0.817, Calmar 0.343) with realized average pairwise correlation between instruments’ traded P&L of only 0.0156 — an order of magnitude below the underlying instruments’ raw price-return correlation. A companion study testing four correlation-aware, non-equal-weight allocation schemes (inverse-volatility, equal risk contribution, hierarchical risk parity, inverse average-correlation) found none improved on equal weighting’s Sharpe; the results are summarized in §11 and detailed in full in `weighting_schemes/comparison.summary.pdf`.

1 Introduction

Fair Value Gaps are three-candle price imbalances left behind by impulsive moves: a gap between the high (or low) of one candle and the low (or high) of a candle two bars later that the middle candle’s range never covers. The working hypothesis behind MetaFVG is that price revisiting such a gap on a higher timeframe is a meaningful liquidity/inefficiency event worth conditioning a trade on, provided a lower-timeframe momentum pattern confirms the move is actually underway at entry time.

The variant documented here layers a second, independent signal on top of the raw FVG zone: a rolling Spearman rank-correlation statistic computed on HTF closes. Rather than using this purely as an agree/reject filter on the zone’s own direction, the mean-reversion configuration takes the gate’s sign as authoritative whenever it disagrees with the zone: the trade, its LTF confirmation, and its risk parameters all pivot to follow the gate, not the zone. This report documents the full signal pipeline (§2–3), the instrument universe and the rationale for its construction (§4), the backtest methodology (§5), and portfolio- and instrument-level results (§6–8), before a parameter sensitivity sweep (§9), a follow-up test of the outperforming configurations it surfaced (§10), a correlation-aware position-sizing study (§11), and closing with limitations (§12).

2 Strategy Methodology

2.1 HTF Fair Value Gap Detection

On the HTF (4h) series, a bullish FVG is registered at bar i when $\text{low}_{i+1} > \text{high}_{i-1}$, with zone bounds $[\text{high}_{i-1}, \text{low}_{i+1}]$; a bearish FVG is the mirror condition, $\text{high}_{i+1} < \text{low}_{i-1}$, zone $[\text{high}_{i+1}, \text{low}_{i-1}]$. The HTF series itself is produced by a causal resample of the underlying LTF data (`label='right', closed='left'`): a 4h bucket’s close is only attributed to a bar once the full 4 hours have elapsed, which rules out a bucket’s own future close leaking into zone detection before that bar has actually finished forming.

2.2 Zone Filtering

Raw FVG zones are filtered on two criteria before becoming tradeable:

- Fill-% threshold: price must retrace into the zone by at least a configured fraction of its height (`htf_fill_pct`) before the zone is considered “live.”
- Max crossing count: a zone that has been crossed by price more than `max_htf_number_crossings` times is treated as exhausted and dropped.

The current price is then checked against the surviving zone set on both sides (bullish and bearish); if it sits inside a filtered zone, that zone’s polarity implies a candidate direction $d \in \{+1, -1\}$ (+1 bullish, -1 bearish).

2.3 Spearman Mean-Reversion Gate

A rolling Spearman rank correlation is computed on the trailing w -bar (default $w = 20$) window of HTF closes:

$$\rho_t = 1 - \frac{6 \sum_t d_t^2}{w(w^2 - 1)}, \quad d_t = \text{rank}(c_t) - t$$

Meaning. $\text{rank}(c_t)$ is the close price’s rank (1st-smallest, $\dots$, w -th-smallest) within the window; t is already the bar’s rank in time. d_t is the gap between “where this bar ranks by price” and “where it ranks by time.” $\rho_t \in [-1, 1]$ summarizes that agreement: $+1$ means price rank and time rank move together perfectly (a monotonic uptrend, any shape), -1 means perfectly monotonic down, 0 means no consistent ordering.

Let d be the candidate direction implied by the HTF zone (as above). Define the target direction under the mean-reversion configuration as

$$d_{\text{target}} = \begin{cases} d & \text{trend-following configuration} \\ -d & \text{mean-reversion configuration (invert_direction=True)} \end{cases}$$

The gate accepts a signal iff

$$\text{sign}(\rho_t) = d_{\text{target}} \quad \text{and} \quad |\rho_t| \geq \tau_\rho$$

This report’s setup uses the mean-reversion configuration exclusively. The critical implementation detail — and the point on which an earlier iteration of this backtest was incorrect — is that d_{target} , not the original zone direction d , propagates downstream: both the LTF momentum confirmation (§2.4) and the trade parameterization (§2.5) are computed in the direction of d_{target} . The trade is a genuine bet on the rank-correlation signal overriding the zone, not merely a zone-direction trade that happens to require gate agreement.

2.4 LTF Momentum Confirmation

Once a gate-accepted d_{target} exists, the last three M15 bars are scanned for a “momentum FVG” pattern (`detect_fvg_momentum_tres_strong`) in that same direction — a stricter, more immediate three-candle imbalance pattern than the HTF zone detector, used purely as an entry-timing trigger. Absent confirmation, the signal is rejected and the pipeline waits for the next bar.

2.5 Trade Parameterization

On confirmation, trade parameters are set as:

Entry = momentum-FVG gap boundary, SL = last confirmed LTF swing pivot (structural),

$$\text{TP} = \text{Entry} \pm \text{ATR}_{14} \times \text{sensitivity} \times \text{risk_reward}$$

SL is therefore a structural level (the most recent confirmed pivot on the LTF series), not a fixed distance; TP is an ATR-scaled multiple of the risk implied by that structural stop. An order is placed as a pending limit at Entry and expires if unfilled by end of day.

2.6 Position Sizing

Two sizing conventions were implemented and tested: fixed notional (a constant 2% of account equity per trade, used exclusively in this report) and risk-normalized (position size derived from `risk_fraction / stop_distance_pct`, capped). Risk-normalized sizing was tested on the same 14-instrument universe and found to reduce blended Sharpe relative to fixed notional (0.260 vs. 0.518); this report therefore documents the fixed-notional configuration throughout.

3 Signal and Execution Pipeline

4 Instrument Universe and Fundamental Diversification

The backtest universe comprises 14 instruments, selected to be diversified by fundamental macro driver rather than by statistical decorrelation alone:

- 7 FX Majors: AUDUSD, EURUSD, GBPUSD, NZDUSD, USDCAD, USDCHF, USDJPY.
- 4 equity indices, each under a different central bank: US500 (Federal Reserve), GER40 (ECB), JP225 (Bank of Japan), HK50 (Hong Kong Monetary Authority / PBoC linkage).
- 3 additional FX minors: USDSGD, EURNOK, USDZAR — chosen as genuinely new currency exposures (Singapore, Norway, South Africa) rather than recombinations of the 7 majors.

The rationale is explicit: the 7 FX Majors alone share a single dominant common factor (broad USD strength / risk sentiment) — their raw price-return correlations run 0.3–0.9 in absolute value once sign convention is accounted for (majors quoting USD as the counter currency move together; majors quoting it as the base currency move opposite). Adding equity indices under different central banks and FX minors with no shared currency leg among the existing set is intended to break that single- factor exposure at the instrument-selection stage, before any portfolio weighting is applied.

5 Data and Backtest Methodology

Historical OHLC data is sourced from MetaTrader 5 for all 14 instruments, at M15 (LTF) resolution, with the HTF (4h) series derived by causal resampling as described in §2. The backtest window spans a 5-year lookback ending July 2026; the blended portfolio’s first valid daily observation is 2022-01-13, once sufficient indicator lookback has accumulated across all 14 instruments. Trades are simulated bar-by-bar: pending limit orders are checked for fill against each subsequent bar’s range, and open positions are checked for SL/TP resolution on every bar thereafter, with SL evaluated before TP on any bar where both levels are contained in the same bar’s range (a conservative assumption). All results in this report use fixed 2% notional sizing per trade (§2.6). Portfolio-level daily returns are computed as the equal-weighted average, across whichever instruments have a closed trade on a given day, of each instrument’s daily P&L as a fraction of account equity; days with no closed trades across the entire universe are excluded.

The return series is markedly positively skewed (1.545) with a favorable tail ratio (1.239), consistent with a strategy structured around asymmetric ATR-scaled targets against structural stops rather than a fixed reward-to-risk ratio. The low day-level win rate (30.89%) alongside a positive Sharpe indicates the edge is concentrated in the size of winning days, not their frequency — expected given the sparse, non-overlapping nature of trade timing across the 14-instrument book (see §7).

Two findings are worth separating. First, the level: realized correlation between traded P&L streams (0.0156 average) is roughly an order of magnitude below the underlying instruments' raw price-return correlation (§4, 0.3–0.9 in absolute value for the FX Majors alone). This gap is driven less by the fundamental-driver diversification of §4 than by the strategy's own sparse, largely non-overlapping trade timing across instruments — each instrument only contributes a return on days it has a closed trade, and those days rarely coincide across the book. Second, the trend: rolling correlation is not stationary. It falls to near-zero (and briefly negative) through 2023–2025 before rising to roughly 0.03–0.04 by mid-2026 — still low in absolute terms, but a genuine regime shift worth monitoring rather than a fixed structural property of the book (§12).

8 Per-Symbol Performance

Table 2 reports standalone performance for each instrument's own trade stream. Equal weighting means every instrument contributes 1/14 of portfolio capital regardless of its standalone Sharpe; six of the fourteen have a negative standalone Sharpe.

Table 2: Per-symbol standalone performance, fixed 2% notional sizing, sorted by Sharpe.

Symbol	Closed Trades	Win Rate	Sharpe	Max DD	Total Return
NZDUSD	352	28.7%	1.141	9.86%	+0.333%
GBPUSD	331	31.7%	1.092	19.42%	+0.213%
HK50	347	28.2%	0.958	20.31%	+0.588%
US500	399	28.6%	0.806	15.94%	+0.350%
AUDUSD	345	24.9%	0.799	12.84%	+0.250%
JP225	362	29.3%	0.541	29.92%	+0.369%
USDCHF	339	25.7%	0.476	11.22%	+0.099%
USDJPY	340	25.6%	-0.130	16.43%	-0.031%
EURNOK	241	22.0%	-0.305	17.07%	-0.077%
GER40	384	24.2%	-0.476	31.66%	-0.195%
USDCAD	347	22.8%	-0.477	15.03%	-0.084%
USDZAR	359	20.6%	-0.609	38.70%	-0.221%
EURUSD	374	20.9%	-0.634	17.04%	-0.111%
USDSGD	319	18.5%	-0.691	16.89%	-0.102%

The negative-Sharpe leg is dominated by USD-quote-as-base pairs (USDJPY, USDCAD, USDZAR, USDSGD) and GER40; the positive-Sharpe leg spans both FX (NZDUSD, GBPUSD, AUDUSD, USDCHF) and equity indices (HK50, US500, JP225). This is not obviously attributable to a single macro grouping, which is itself weak evidence against the mean-reversion edge being a single latent factor trade in disguise.

9 Parameter Sensitivity Analysis

To assess how robust the headline result (§6) is to the exact choice of gate and risk parameters, the equal-weight 14-instrument portfolio Sharpe was recomputed across a grid of alternate configurations, holding everything else at the report’s baseline values ($w = 20$, $\tau_\rho = 0.5$, ATR sensitivity = 4.0).

9.1 Spearman Gate: Window and Threshold

Figure 6 sweeps the rolling window $w \in \{10, 15, 20, 25, 30\}$ against the gate threshold $\tau_\rho \in \{0.3, \dots, 0.7\}$, a 5×5 grid of full portfolio backtests. The baseline cell ($w = 20$, $\tau_\rho = 0.5$) is outlined.

Equal-Weight Portfolio Sharpe: Spearman Gate Sensitivity

The surface is positive across most of the grid (18 of 25 cells > 0), which is the main robustness claim: the mean-reversion edge is not a knife-edge artifact of the specific $(20, 0.5)$ choice. That said, two patterns are worth flagging rather than smoothing over. First, short windows are fragile: $w = 10$ is the only row that goes decisively negative, and does so across three of five thresholds ($\tau_\rho \geq 0.5$) — a 10-bar rank-correlation window is evidently too noisy to gate reliably at stricter thresholds. Second, and more strikingly, the baseline is not the grid optimum: $w = 25$, $\tau_\rho = 0.4$ reaches Sharpe 0.777, well above the baseline’s 0.536 (recomputed on this sweep’s slightly different data snapshot; §9.3), and the entire $w = 25$ row outperforms $w = 20$ at every threshold except 0.5. This was not re-optimized into a new baseline for this report — doing so on the same sample that produced the sweep would be in-sample parameter selection, exactly the failure mode flagged for the current $(20, 0.5)$ choice in §12. It is presented here as evidence for a follow-up out-of-sample recalibration, not as a superior configuration to adopt directly.

9.2 ATR Sensitivity

Figure 7 sweeps ATR sensitivity (the multiplier on ATR_{14} in the TP formula, §2.5) from 2.0 to 6.0, holding risk_reward fixed at its default (2.0). The two parameters are not swept independently: TP depends only on their product ($TP = \text{Entry} \pm ATR_{14} \times \text{atr_sensitivity} \times \text{risk_reward}$, `metafvg.py::calculate_trade_parameters`), so a 2D grid over both would repeat identical trades along every constant-product diagonal; sweeping one with the other fixed is the non-redundant version of the same test.

This relationship is monotonic and considerably steeper than the gate parameters: Sharpe falls from 0.801 at $\text{atr_sensitivity} = 2.0$ to 0.112 at $= 6.0$, roughly a $7\times$ range against the gate grid’s mixed-sign but comparatively narrower spread. Tighter, ATR-scaled targets outperform wider ones throughout the tested range, with no evidence of an interior optimum above the baseline – the best value tested is the smallest one. This is the single largest lever tested in this report and the strongest candidate for follow-up work: the current default (4.0) is not obviously optimal, and the monotonic trend suggests values below 2.0 merit testing before concluding where it flattens out.

9.3 A Note on This Sweep’s Data Snapshot

The OHLC cache underlying this section was fetched on a different day than the cache behind §6–8 (a few days’ difference in the trailing 5-year window boundary). Recomputing the exact baseline cell on this sweep’s snapshot gives Sharpe 0.536 against the 0.518 reported in Table 1 — a 3.5% relative difference, consistent with ordinary sampling noise from the shifted window rather than a discrepancy in methodology.

10 Exploring Outperforming Parameter Sets

Both axes of §9 turned up configurations that outperformed the baseline on the sweep’s own Sharpe metric: $w = 25$, $\tau_\rho = 0.4$ on the gate side, and $\text{atr_sensitivity} = 2.0$ on the risk side. This section takes those two findings further than the sweep did: it backtests each standout in isolation, and also backtests the two combined into a single configuration, to see whether their effects stack, cancel, or overlap. All four configurations below (baseline plus three variants) were backtested on the identical OHLC snapshot, so differences are attributable purely to the parameter changes, not to the snapshot-day noise discussed in §9.3.

Table 3: Baseline vs. outperforming variants, equal-weight 14-instrument portfolio, identical data snapshot.

Configuration	w	τ_ρ	ATR sens.	Sharpe	Sortino	Calmar	Max DD
Baseline	20	0.5	4.0	0.536	0.851	0.353	−0.0533%
Best Gate	25	0.4	4.0	0.777	1.324	0.433	−0.0796%
Best ATR	20	0.5	2.0	0.801	1.407	0.563	−0.0380%
Combined Mix	25	0.4	2.0	0.910	1.647	0.787	−0.0318%

The two levers stack rather than overlap: Combined Mix’s Sharpe (0.910) exceeds both single-lever variants (Best Gate 0.777, Best ATR 0.801), and its Calmar (0.787) is comfortably the best of the four, with the shallowest max drawdown (−0.0318%). This is evidence the gate parameters and the ATR sensitivity are addressing genuinely different sources of variance in the strategy, not both proxying for the same underlying effect.

A less obvious result is visible in Figure 8: Best Gate has the highest raw total return of the four (+0.227% vs. Combined Mix’s +0.165%) but the lowest risk-adjusted ranking among the three variants, because it also carries the highest volatility (0.0443% annualized vs. Combined Mix’s 0.0275%) and the deepest drawdown of any configuration tested in this section. Total return and Sharpe do not agree on a winner here — which one matters depends on whether the objective is raw return or risk-adjusted return, and this report optimizes for the latter throughout (matching the convention used for every other comparison in this document, e.g. §11).

This is not a new recommended baseline. Combined Mix was found by taking the best cell from a sweep and the best point from a line, both evaluated on the same sample now used to declare a winner — exactly the in-sample selection risk already flagged in §12 for the current (20, 0.5, 4.0) baseline, now compounded across two dimensions instead of one. The honest reading is that this section demonstrates the strategy has more headroom than the baseline captures, not that Combined Mix is the configuration to trade live. An out-of-sample or walk-forward validation of (25, 0.4, 2.0) specifically is the natural next step before treating it as anything more than a promising candidate.

11 Alternative Weighting Schemes

A companion study tested whether replacing equal weighting with a correlation-aware allocation could reduce realized portfolio correlation further without giving up risk-adjusted return. Four schemes were tested: Inverse-Volatility (naive risk parity, $w_i \propto 1/\sigma_i$), Equal Risk Contribution (true risk parity via the full covariance matrix), Hierarchical Risk Parity (correlation-distance clustering with recursive bisection), and Inverse Average-Correlation ($w_i \propto 1/\bar{\rho}_i$, the most literal targeting of low correlation). Table 4 summarizes the outcome; full detail, including per-scheme weight tables and convergence diagnostics, is in `weighting_schemes/comparison_summary.pdf`.

Table 4: Weighting scheme comparison, ranked by Sharpe. Wtd. Avg. Corr. and Diversification Ratio (DR) are computed under each scheme’s own weight vector.

Scheme	Wtd. Avg. Corr.	DR	Sharpe	Sortino	Calmar
Equal Weight (baseline)	0.0156	2.081	0.518	0.817	0.343
Inverse Avg-Correlation	0.0118	2.110	0.483	0.760	0.315
Inverse-Volatility	0.0159	1.809	0.321	0.504	0.200
Equal Risk Contribution	0.0142	1.831	0.311	0.488	0.191
Hierarchical Risk Parity	0.0170	1.538	0.170	0.265	0.106

None of the four schemes improved on equal weighting’s Sharpe. Three (Inverse-Volatility, ERC, HRP) allocate on standalone or covariance-implied variance and end up systematically defunding the equity indices — precisely the instruments providing the book’s real cross-asset diversification, since they are the ones least correlated with the FX legs — which worsens both correlation and Sharpe simultaneously. Only Inverse Average-Correlation, which targets correlation directly rather than variance, improved both the weighted correlation and the diversification ratio, at a comparatively small Sharpe cost (0.518 $\rightarrow$ 0.483, -7%). The practical conclusion is that this portfolio’s low realized correlation was earned upstream, by fundamental-driver instrument selection (§4) and by the strategy’s own sparse trade timing (§7), not by weighting — equal weighting remains the recommended configuration for live use.

12 Limitations and Future Work

- Not live-traded. All results are simulated against historical MT5 data; no live slippage, requoting, or partial-fill behavior is modeled beyond the conservative SL-before-TP same-bar assumption of §5.
- Single data source. All OHLC data comes from one MT5 broker feed; results have not been cross-validated against an independent data vendor.
- Gate threshold calibrated in-sample. τ_ρ and the rolling window $w = 20$ were calibrated on the FX Majors subset and carried over to the full 14-instrument universe without a separate out-of-sample recalibration step; the sensitivity sweep of §9 finds a higher-Sharpe cell elsewhere in the grid ($w = 25$, $\tau_\rho = 0.4$), which is evidence this concern is live rather than theoretical.
- ATR sensitivity may not be optimally tuned. §9 finds a monotonic Sharpe improvement all the way down to the smallest value tested (2.0), with no interior optimum found – the current default (4.0) has not been shown to be a good choice, only a historically-used one.
- Sparse per-instrument trade counts. 241–399 closed trades per instrument over 5 years ($\sim 50\text{--}80/\text{year}$) is a modest sample for per-symbol Sharpe estimates in Table 2; the portfolio-level result in Table 1 is more robust by pooling across instruments.
- Non-stationary correlation. The rolling correlation trend of §7 rising toward 0.03–0.04 into 2026 warrants monitoring — a continued rise would erode the diversification benefit the equal-weight conclusion of §11 currently rests on.
- Risk-normalized sizing underperforms fixed notional here (§2.6), which is counterintuitive relative to typical portfolio theory and not fully explained; worth further investigation before ruling it out for other configurations.

13 Conclusion

The Spearman mean-reversion configuration of MetaFVG, blended equally across a 14-instrument, fundamentally-diversified universe, produces a Sharpe of 0.518 with realized cross-instrument correlation an order of magnitude below the underlying instruments’ structural correlation. That diversification benefit is attributable primarily to instrument selection and the strategy’s own sparse trade timing rather than to portfolio weighting: four correlation-aware weighting schemes were tested and none improved on simple equal weighting. The strongest caveats are a rising rolling- correlation trend into 2026 and the fact that gate thresholds were calibrated on a subset of the full universe — both flagged as priorities for follow-up work rather than settled findings.

A Full Trade List

Every closed trade from the baseline configuration ($w = 20$, $\tau_\rho = 0.5$, ATR sensitivity = 4.0, fixed 2% notional sizing, §6), listed chronologically by entry time across all 14 instruments. Entry, SL, TP, and Exit are raw price levels in each instrument’s native quote units (not normalized across instruments); PnL is the raw price-difference return per unit $((\text{exit} - \text{entry}) \times \text{direction})$, matching the definition in `metafvg_backtest.py::Trade.pnl`, not a dollar or percent-of-equity figure. No lot size / position size column is included: this backtest engine has no concept of real MT5 lot or contract sizing at the individual-trade level anywhere in the codebase — portfolio-level statistics throughout this report (Table 1 onward) are computed from `vectorbt`’s abstract `size_type='percent'` sizing (a fixed 2% of current equity per trade, chosen for cross-instrument comparability of percentage-based statistics, not as a claim about real position sizing), and live trading (`metafvg.py`) uses a static, externally-configured lot size rather than a per-trade computed one. Direction (long/short) is recoverable from the price levels: $\text{SL} < \text{Entry} < \text{TP}$ indicates a long trade, $\text{SL} > \text{Entry} > \text{TP}$ a short.
